

Concentrating the media will have a negative impact on the amount and quality of information given to the american people. The virtual monopolies that will result will cut down on competition, and in turn cut down on the level of detail, clarity, and truth we hope to see in the media today. By having one source for our news, we lose the ability to see a story from different angles, and evaluate the objectivity of the report.